PE teachers have flexibility within their curriculum to explore a variety of physical activities, games, and health topics based on student interests as well as their own. Great emphasis is placed on building a class culture where students have a platform to take risks, learn to work in groups with classmates, and practice leadership.

PE teachers teach two different grades (5/7 and 6/8), using different classrooms as a starting place before moving to a large outdoor grass field and black top for activities.
